Death of Christ (Chronograph)

The Friday on which Christ died was the 14th day of month of NISAN; the Passover was 15th of Nisan was Saturday. In the Interval between A.D. 27 and 34, the 14th of NISAN fell on Fri. in 30 AD & 33 AD. Since there are good reasons for holding that Christ's ministry began in 28, A.D. 30 is the most likely year for His death. If so the date was Apr 7.

The Hebrew Calendar

Civil day was reckoned from Sunrise to Sunset. Jewish Sabbaths and feasts began with the setting of the sun.

The hours of the day were 12, beginning at our 6 AM (about) and ending at 6 PM. The 3rd, 6th, ninth and 12th hours were especially sacred to prayer.

The night was divided into 4 watches Evening Watch - 6 PM  $\rightarrow$  9 PM. The midnight watch 9 PM  $\rightarrow$  12 M.N.

"Cockcrow" was at 12 M.N.

1. The first part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the various methods of determining the rate of reaction. It is shown that the method of initial rates is the most reliable, and that the method of half-lives is only applicable to first-order reactions. The method of integrated rate laws is also discussed, and it is shown that it can be used to determine the order of a reaction.

Jesus made his triumphant entrance into Jerusalem for the Passover. He threw the money lenders out of the Temple. These events excited the multitude. Jewish authorities decided to act against him. They persuaded Judas Iscariot to betray him.

He was arrested in Gethsemane; tried for the capital crime of blasphemy before the Sanhedrin and convicted on the evidence of having called himself the Messiah and the Son of God.

Pontius Pilate, the Roman procurator of Judaea sought to save Jesus, but later yielded to the multitude and crucified him between 2 thieves, on a hill outside Jerusalem, known as CALVARY.

With such a wide-spread system of "credits," the Roman world, like our own, had its money flurries and "panics". A crop failure in Africa, or the loss of a richly laden merchant fleet by a hurricane in the Red sea, or a period of rash speculation in Gaul, was felt at once in the money market in every part of the empire. The failure of a great banking house in Antioch might drag down others in Rome and Alexandria. Thus in the year of Christ's crucifixion, there happened the first great money panic in history, - an event which

BANKING AND PANICS

Banking had long been an important business. The EARLY Romans and Greeks often buried their money in the earth for safe keeping, but that practice had long ceased except with such ignorant or slothful rustics as are rebuked in Christ's parable. Instead, all over the Roman world, men placed money with bankers, to receive it again with interest. The bankers, of course, had earned the interest (and their own profits) by lending the money out meanwhile at higher rates than they paid. As with our own day, so in the Roman empire, a large part of the business was done on borrowed capital furnished by bankers.

And as trade grew, it added another feature to the banking business. Innumerable merchants in every part of the empire would come, day by day, to owe one another large sums. To carry the coin from one frontier to another for each such debt would be costly - and indeed impossible for business of such volume as had grown up. So banks, as with us, had come to sell "bills of exchange," or drafts. A merchant in Alexandria who owed money to a citizen of Cologne could pay the amount into a home bank (plus some "premium" for the bank's service) and receive an order for the amount on a bank in Cologne. This slip of paper would then be sent to the creditor in Cologne, who could present it at his bank and get his money. The Cologne bank, sooner or later, would have occasion to sell a draft upon the Alexandria bank, in like fashion. At some convenient time, the two banks would have to settle their balance in coin; but the amount to be carried from one to the other would be very small, compared with the total amount of business.
